

Negative & Positive Words

10 Minutes

Realise how the words you use to describe yourself can impact your feelings and wellbeing. How often do you treat yourself with criticism rather than compassion?

Useless

Unlikable

Inadequate

Incompetent

Worthless

Lazy

Stupid

Foolish

Unreliable

Indecisive

Inferior

Weak

Lovable

Intelligent

Ambitious

Competent

Empowered

Appreciated

Supportive

Trustworthy

Reliable

Admirable

Strong

Confident

1. Look at the words on the first page and allow each one to sink in. Imagine they apply to you and notice how they make you feel. Do they impact your mood? Give each one a score from -10 to 10 (in the box next to it).

Makes me feel really bad	Makes me feel quite bad	Has no impact on my mood	Makes me feel quite good	Makes me feel really good
-10	5	0	5	10

2. Now look back at the worksheet. Some of these words might be quite familiar to you. Have you ever named yourself like that? If so, circle them.

These are your self-critical thoughts. Think about other words you use when you are self-critical. You can write them down on the side.

3. Now do the same for the second page. Listen to yourself and imagine these words apply to you. How do they make you feel? Give each one a score from -10 to 10.

4. Do the same reflection. Are any of these words familiar to you? Do you consider yourself to be like that? If so, circle them.

These are self-affirmations. Think about other words you use when you are self-affirming. You can write them down on the side.

5. Now look back at both pages. How many of the 'negative words' and how many of the 'positive words' do you usually use to describe yourself. Is there a gap?

It is important to become aware of the way we treat ourselves and what that does to us. Often we find it easier to dwell on our mistakes than to acknowledge times we did well.